ABOUT COURT THEATRE

Court Theatre is the professional theatre of the University of Chicago, dedicated to innovation, inquiry, intellectual engagement, and community service. Court endeavors to make a lasting contribution to classic American theatre by expanding the canon of translations, adaptations, and classic texts. The theatre revives lost masterpieces; illuminates familiar texts; explores the African American theatrical canon; and discovers fresh, modern classics. Court engages and inspires its audience by providing artistically distinguished productions, audience enrichment activities, and student educational experiences. In all of this work, we are committed to recognizing, addressing, and eradicating racism, as we strive to better serve our South Side community.

Dear Court Theatre Family,

We are thrilled to welcome you to August Wilson’s Two Trains Running. Written in 1990 and nominated for both the Pulitzer Prize and the Tony Award for Best Play, Two Trains Running is the seventh installment in Wilson’s magisterial literary creation, the American Century Cycle. Dedicating one play to each decade of the 20th century, Wilson created a matchless ten-play chronicle of the African American experience. Largely set in Pittsburgh’s Hill District, the plays in Wilson’s American Century Cycle document the epic history of American democracy through the everyday lives of the men and women who call the Hill District home.

Court Resident Artist Ron OJ Parson is nationally renowned as an interpreter of Wilson’s dramatic vision. Since 2006, Parson has brought eight works from Wilson’s ten-part magnum opus to our stage. With Two Trains Running, Parson brings the ninth Wilson play to Court’s stage and draws nearer to our long-cherished dream of completing the American Century Cycle.

Set in 1969, Two Trains Running looks back on the turbulent decade of the 60s, when the Civil Rights Movement, the war in Vietnam, the rise of Black Power, the Women’s Movement, and the 1968 assassinations of King and Kennedy signaled the seismic changes re-making American democracy. Then as now, an upsurge in progressive political movements sparked a reactionary backlash. Against this backdrop of national conflict, the denizens of Wilson’s Hill District contemplate an America on the brink of an uncertain future.

We are grateful to the Joyce Foundation for their ongoing support of Resident Artist Ron OJ Parson. We also thank our generous production sponsors, Allstate, Gustavo Bamberger and Martha Van Haisma, and Neil Ross and Lynn Hauser. Thank you for joining us and we hope you enjoy August Wilson’s powerful text.

You have said that you always want to direct August Wilson. What is it that excites you about returning to his work again and again?

Great plays are great plays. I get excited about doing great plays whether they’re August Wilson or anybody. Besides Shakespeare, what playwright has written ten plays that you can see somewhere, at almost any time, and it’s a beautiful piece of work? Wilson’s plays are deep—rich in character and language.

I’ve done Jitney five times and Ma Rainey’s Black Bottom four times. But each time they’re different because of the artists you’re working with. I do use a lot of what I call “Wilson-ites.” These are actors who perform a lot of August Wilson, not only with me, but with other directors as well. They know the rhythm and music of the piece. The characters are so well-developed that you can really dig into it as an actor or director. I’ve acted in a couple of Wilson’s plays as well, and it’s always fun. That’s the basic thing—they’re fun.

There is a photo of you with August Wilson. What was your relationship to him, and what can you tell us about August Wilson the man?

I met August Wilson when he was the resident writer at Yale before he blew up. On the opening night of Ma Rainey on Broadway, I got to go backstage, and that was a big deal going backstage with the original cast of that play. Little did I know that later on, I’d be doing this.

That picture of us was taken when I directed the inaugural production of The Piano Lesson with Congo Square Theatre Company. He came to see it.

Also, I understudied Jitney at the Goodman, when he was writing it. I would watch the play and watch how he worked. He was a cool dude. You could talk to him, anybody could ask him questions. He loved talking about the world.
Many classic playwrights insert themselves into their plays. Where do you see August Wilson in this play?

Definitely in the music, in the characters, the poetry, the language, the lyricism, all of that. Also, you can see how he understood the history and the specifics of the neighborhoods he was writing about. I have a couple friends in Pittsburgh who were around when Wilson was first getting started, and they used to talk about how he would sit in the diners and just listen to people and talk. That’s what you hear in his writing, the reality of those situations.

How does Two Trains Running stand out from the other plays in Wilson’s American Century Cycle?

They all stand out in their own way. Each decade has its own thing that makes it special. The 60s was a volatile time in this country, and that makes Two Trains special. A lot of people remember it, and older audiences can relate. They’ll know the music, they’ll know the style of dress, the hairstyles, so it will resonate with them. Younger people look at it as history.

What does August Wilson reveal or teach us in this play?

I don’t like to say that a writer is trying to teach somebody a lesson. If I had to say, it would be that we are resilient people and we deal with difficult issues. We are relentless people, and we’re able to persevere through everything. That’s what the characters have to do in this play. The Black Power Movement is happening, and they’re dealing with mental illness, and it's those issues that permeate the environment in this urban setting. We have had to deal with a lot of the things that communities like the Hill District in Pittsburgh had to deal with, the change. The lesson is that we are a strong people and we will survive through everything that is thrown at us.

Tell us about your approach to this play and if you have discovered something new about it this time.

The approach to this play is the same as any play. I try to find the spiritual aspect of it and enhance the love that is in the play. I always start plays with love, and in particular, this one is love of the neighborhood, love of the people, love of the culture—all of those things.
Jack Magaw does a lot of my sets, and we always try to make it so that when people from Pittsburgh come in, they feel like they’re in Pittsburgh. That’s done with the accessories on the set. Adding those little things make it Pittsburgh—like the mugs, a poster on the wall, even the music. A lot of great musicians are from Pittsburgh. There’s a lot of those details that make it comfortable for people from Pittsburgh to come see the play and feel like they’re at home.

Two Trains Running is somewhat of a marathon for the actors. How do you help them keep the flow and energy going throughout the entire play?

All plays are marathons, but these are Wilson-ites. For them it’s not a marathon, it’s just a joy. As far as keeping the flow, it’s music. They’re playing an instrument when they talk. It’s like a band playing a song. It’s August Wilson, and they know the rhythm.

What can audiences expect to see in this production?

They can expect a good production—what they’ve always gotten from us when we do August Wilson. These actors are rarin’ to go.

-Melissa Schmitz, Marketing Associate
Let’s begin with a few earned titles and monikers: Playwright. Historian. Preserver of culture. And as New York Times theatre critic Charles Isherwood once called him, “Theatre’s Poet of Black America.” Known as the playwright that put 100 years of African American history on the stage, no other playwright has been able to achieve what August Wilson has accomplished with his ten-play cycle, also known as the Pittsburgh Cycle or the American Century Cycle. Wilson himself has described his ten-play cycle as his effort to craft a 400-year autobiography of the African American experience. The plays in the cycle include Jitney (1982); Ma Rainey’s Black Bottom (1984); Fences (1987); Joe Turner’s Come and Gone (1988); The Piano Lesson (1990); Two Trains Running (1991); Seven Guitars (1995); King Hedley II (1999); Gem of the Ocean (2003); and Radio Golf (2005).

Wilson’s oeuvre has earned him several awards, including the Tony Award for Best Play (Fences, 1987), the Olivier Award for Best New Play (Jitney, 2002), and two Pulitzer Prizes for Drama (Fences, 1987 and The Piano Lesson, 1990), among others.

Undeniably, August Wilson was fascinated with the history of Black Americans. The lack of being formally educated about Black history piqued his curiosity. Wilson once stated that he was “encouraged by the fact that in all [his] reading of history, seldom, if ever, was the Black experience in America given any weight, seldom were they admitted to the larger playing field of cause and effect.” As such, August Wilson “sought then to simply restore that experience to a primary role, thereby giving the facts of history a different perspective, and creating, in essence, a world in which the Black American was the spiritual center.” Wilson said, “Since I was not a historian but a writer of fiction, I saw as my task the invention of characters.” Accordingly, through his characters, Wilson laid claim to a past that is too often forgotten, thus filling the gaps in historical records by using his artistic license to mesh facts with a fictional imagination.

Wilson’s engagement with history is prominent in Two Trains Running—the 1960s play. However, Wilson does not directly address the historical events of the 1960s. Instead, these events hover over the play as a backdrop, thus informing the actions and motivations of the characters. The history that hovers over the play includes the legacies of leaders of the Civil Rights and Black Power Movements, namely Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X. It also includes the death of Robert Kennedy, the beginning of gentrification and displacement within Black communities, and the fallout from the Vietnam War. When asked why he kept these historic events of the 1960s off the stage, Wilson responded with the following:

The play does not speak to the so-called red-lettered events of the sixties, because at the time all of that was going on—the assassination of Martin Luther King and Bobby Kennedy and all the anti-war administrations, go to work every day, you still had to pay your rent, you still had to put food on the table. And those events, while they may have in some way affected the character of society as a whole, didn’t reach the average person who was concerned with just simply living. And so in Two Trains I was more concerned with those people and what they were doing and how they were dealing with it, than I was writing a “sixties” play.

As such, Wilson peoples his plays with everyday folks—those whose lives fluctuated between what was happening nationally and what was happening regionally. Although Wilson put fictional stories on the stage, it is evident, as in Two Trains Running, that these stories are inspired by—and perhaps haunted—by real history.

As we emerge from the challenges of the last two years, we’re thrilled to share plays that take audiences on a journey of healing, redemption, and celebration. From classic comedy to resonant dramas, and culminating in a celebratory musical, it is our hope that the 2022/23 season will both delight and uplift audiences with stories of our shared humanity.

ARSENIC AND OLD LACE
by Joseph Kesselring
Original Broadway Production by Howard Lindsay & Russel Crouse
Directed by Ron OJ Parson

September 2 - October 2, 2022
Mild-mannered sisters Martha and Abby Brewster live in their spacious Victorian home in a quiet neighborhood in Brooklyn with an eccentric nephew, Teddy. Famed for their hospitality, Martha and Abby are adored by their neighbors and frequently entertain guests. But when their other nephew, Mortimer, discovers his aunts’ macabre secrets, a hilarious chain of events ensue in this character-driven farce. Resident Artist Ron OJ Parson directs this beloved American classic, bringing much-needed humor and healing laughter to the stage in Court’s 2022/23 Season opener.

THE ISLAND
by Athol Fugard, John Kani, and Winston Ntshona
Directed by Gabrielle Randle-Bent

November 11 - December 4, 2022
John and Winston are political prisoners on South Africa’s infamous Robben Island, spending their days toiling at grueling, futile tasks in the prison’s quarry. At night, they secretly rehearse a two-man version of Antigone and find solace and strength in their burgeoning friendship. The Island is at once a sobering glimpse into the social, physical, and psychological wounds of Apartheid; a lesson in the complex work of liberation; and a testament to the transformative power of theatre. Frequent collaborator Gabrielle Randle-Bent makes her solo directorial debut at Court, bringing her vision of resistance and resilience to the stage.
FEN
by Caryl Churchill
Directed by Vanessa Stalling

February 10 - March 5, 2023

On the marshy fens of England in the 1980s, ghosts of the past haunt the women who labor as tenant farmers in the potato fields. When Val seizes on a new relationship as a path to escape the crushing bonds of work, poverty, and family, she is confronted with the explosive repercussions of her decision. Employing astonishing theatrical imagery, Churchill’s FEN shows how the intricate pressures of gender and class both shape and distort the women. Jeff Award-winning director Vanessa Stalling returns to Court to bring her striking clarity and fresh perspective to the path-breaking text that cemented Churchill’s reputation as one of our greatest living playwrights.

THE GOSPEL AT COLONUS
Adaptation and Original Lyrics by Lee Breuer
Adapted Lyrics by Lee Breuer & Bob Telson, Music by Bob Telson
Production by Mark J.P. Hood and Charles Newell

May 12 - June 11, 2023

Soulful and stirring, The Gospel at Colonus reimagines the story of Oedipus as the centerpiece of an African American Pentecostal church service. A redemptive celebration, this one-of-a-kind theatrical event breathes new life into a classic myth with a score of powerful gospel music. A bold collaboration from an extraordinary team of artists led by Mark J.P. Hood and Charles Newell, The Gospel at Colonus builds upon the strengths and experiences of its artists to bring this smash hit to life with new clarity on Chicago’s South Side.
KIERRA BUNCH (Risa) is thrilled to be back at Court after appearing King Hedley II (Jeff Nomination/Supporting Role). She was recently seen in Definition’s White and Windy City Playhouse’s Recipe for Disaster. She also appeared Windy City Playhouse’s Southern Gothic and Lookingglass’ Plantation. She’s had the honor of working with many other Chicago theatres including Urban Theater Company, Black Ensemble, and eta Creative Arts (Black Theater Alliance Nomination, Best New Actress, Best Performance in an Ensemble). She can currently be seen in a recurring role in South Side on HBO Max. Television includes Shameless, Chicago Med, and FOX’s Empire. She was a series regular on the Emmy Award-winning children’s show Green Screen Adventures. Kierra is very thankful for her family and friends who helped her embark on this journey. AUGUST WILSON (Playwright, April 27 1945–October 2, 2005) authored Gem of the Ocean, Joe Turner’s Come and Gone, Ma Rainey’s Black Bottom, The Piano Lesson, Seven Guitars, Fences, Two Trains Running, Jitney, King Hedley II, and Radio Golf. These works explore the heritage and experience of African Americans, decade-by-decade, over the course of the twentieth century. His plays have been produced at regional theaters across the country and all over the world, as well as on Broadway. In 2003, Mr. Wilson made his professional stage debut in his one-man show, How I Learned What I Learned. Mr. Wilson’s works garnered many awards including Pulitzer Prizes for Fences (1987) and for The Piano Lesson (1990); a Tony Award for Fences; Great Britain’s Olivier Award for Jitney; as well as eight New York Drama Critics Circle Awards for Ma Rainey’s Black Bottom, Fences, Joe Turner’s Come and Gone, The Piano Lesson, Two Trains Running, Seven Guitars, Jitney, and Radio Golf. Additionally, the cast recording of Ma Rainey’s Black Bottom received a 1985 Grammy Award, and Mr. Wilson received a 1995 Emmy Award nomination for his screenplay adaptation of The Piano Lesson. Mr. Wilson’s early works included the one-act plays The Janitor, Recycle, The Coldest Day of the Year, Malcolm X, The Homecoming and the musical satire Black Bart and the Sacred Hills. Mr. Wilson received many fellowships and awards, including Rockefeller and Guggenheim Fellowships in Playwriting, the Whiting Writers Award, 2003 Heinz Award, was awarded a 1999 National Humanities Medal by the President. of the United States, and received numerous honorary degrees from colleges and universities, as well as the only high school diploma ever issued by the Carnegie Library of Pittsburgh. He was an alumnus of New Dramatists, a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, a 1995 inductee into the American Academy of Arts and Letters, and on October 16, 2005, Broadway renamed the theater located at 245 West 52nd Street The August Wilson Theatre. Additionally, Mr. Wilson was posthumously inducted into the Theater Hall of Fame in 2007. Mr. Wilson was born and raised in the Hill District of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania and lived in Seattle, Washington at the time of his death. He is immediately survived by his two daughters, Sakina Ansari and Azula Carmen Wilson, and his wife, costume designer Constanza Romero.
